FROM THE HEALTH OFFICER

Vaccination Alert
May 17, 2015

Last fall I wrote about the decreasing immunization rates among Maine school children and the threat that poses to all of us, especially them and their peers (September 2014 Mt. Vernon Newsletter). Tom Ward of Mt. Vernon alerted me today to the state-wide reports from the Maine Center for Disease Control of Measles/Mumps/Rubella (MMR) immunization rates in kindergarten and first grade for each Maine school. The report is very worrisome (<http://www.pressherald.com/2015/05/17/state-data-show-dangerous-levels-of-unvaccinated-students/>). Some grade schools in Maine have under 80% of children vaccinated in kindergarten and first grade.

State health policies for years have required full immunization of children before they can enter school, for the protection of all; exceptions for religious and medical reasons have never exceeded 1-2%. The recent report shows that parents of 4% of Mt. Vernon elementary school kindergarteners and 13% of first graders have not immunized their children against MMR for "philosophical reasons", a new opt-out category now allowed by recent state legislation. Other nearby schools have done better. The Vienna/New Sharon Cape Cod Hill school reports 7% of kindergarteners and 3% of first graders have "philosophically" opted out of MMR immunizations, 3% and 0% respectively in Manchester, and 5% and 5% in Farmington.

As I explained in my article last year, overall population resistance to infectious diseases, when immunization levels exceed 90%, is called "herd immunity" by scientists. When immunization rates drop below that level, there is a large enough pool of susceptible children present to sustain an epidemic.

Why are more parents declining to immunize their kids? Many parents understandably may worry that the number of shots recommended nowadays seems excessive. It certainly is more than our generation endured. But the return in reduced illness and mortality is substantial.

Other parents worry about the mercury preservative (thimerosal) once used, because it does cause more local reactions (sore arms). However, now it has been removed from shots for those under age 6. Probably most importantly, an initial report in 1998 of 12 children, who seemed to have developed autism after measles/mumps/rubella (German measles) shots, understandably frightened many. However, more extensive studies proved the autism/MMR connection wrong. The senior author of the 1998 paper was later sanctioned and his paper retracted because of fraud, conflicts of interest, and data falsification. Subsequent researchers have been unable to find a link. Autism is a relatively newly recognized disease and studies are continuing to identify its causes and treatments, but it is now clear autism is not caused by vaccines.

Further vaccine refinements included removing all cellular material from the whooping cough vaccine to reduce vaccine fevers. Many killed vaccines do still contain aluminum salts because they are benign and act as “adjuvants”, chemical enhancers of the immune response needed to protect.

Although only MMR immunization rates are being reported in this KJ news article, I worry greatly that other types of immunization rates are falling for similar reasons, particularly those for whooping cough (pertussis), polio, hemophilus (causes bad pneumonia and meningitis in kids), and pneumococcus (causes severe pneumonia and meningitis in young children and adults). Young, pre-school children are very vulnerable; they are the first to suffer if school age kids bring these diseases, especially whooping cough, home to them before they are fully immunized. We can’t immunize babies effectively for whooping cough. We can protect them only by preventing it in older children and adults.

It has been a long road from the days of many serious common diseases, to the present where immunizations offer significant protections, but imperfectly unless all participate. If we are to live, work and play together, we cannot allow immunization opt outs, any more than we can allow driving on the wrong side of the road. Parents falsely hoping to protect their own children by avoiding vaccinating them appropriately, jeopardize the health of all of our children and all of us. I think we should go back to tougher vaccination requirements for school children and eliminate the “philosophical” option.

NEIGHBORS DRIVING NEIGHBORS

Neighbors Driving Neighbors Gears Up; Seeks Coordinator

Neighbors Driving Neighbors plans to begin offering rides this summer to Seniors and others unable to drive in the towns of Fayette, Mount Vernon, Vienna, Rome and Belgrade. DR. SHAW MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Library Column June 2015

Our “Be a Hero!” summer reading program is shaping up. All story/activity periods will take place at the library at 4pm on Monday afternoons starting June 29 and going through July. While we love super hero characters – especially those featured in children’s books (Traction Man by Mini Grey!), our Monday afternoon activities will revolve more around the “every day heroes” of a community. This is what our schedule looks like:

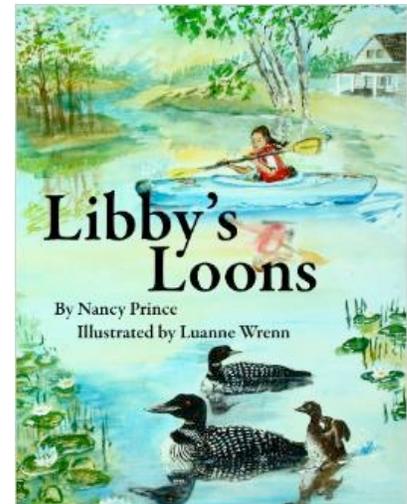

June 29, Maine author Nancy Prince, who wrote Libby’s Loons (the main character is a bit of a hero, trying to protect loons!). Nancy’s programs are geared towards both kids and adults, so please join us.

July 6, Fire Fighter hero from Mt. Vernon! One of our heroes will come visit with us.

July 13, Mrs. Hatt, our magnificent 4th grade teacher hero, with story time and craft.

July 20, One of our Mt. Vernon Rescue heroes (complete with ambulance!)

July 27, and lastly, our fine local music hero, singer Dan Simons, who will do music and song with our young patrons. His performance was very popular last year. You’ll love it.

We’ll send flyers home with MVES students this month so you can keep track of the schedule for the children’s programs.

Our housing discussion (Home is where the heart is) will be at the library on Sunday, June 7, @ 3pm. Sandy Wright, Rebecca Dorr, and Greg Plimpton (who builds accessory housing in Southern Maine) will be on hand to talk about their experiences with trying to help people figure out housing issues faced by both young folks just starting out, and seniors, who live in small rural communities. We want to hear your frustrations and worries about housing, as well as share ideas you may have about making home a safe, affordable, and comforting place within a thriving, caring community. Rebecca and Mary Anne will bring some refreshments.

The annual used book sale will be at the Mt. Vernon Community Center as usual on Saturday, July 18, starting at 9am. We have so many books to sell! Join us to browse the tables, buy lots of books for summer reading, and enjoy impromptu visits with various community members. We’ll have paperback & hard cover fiction and nonfiction, children’s books, as well as some movies and audiobooks.

And finally, our annual Community Poetry Reading is scheduled for Thursday evening, August 6, at 7pm in the Mt. Vernon Community Center. Mark your calendars – a beautiful evening, with community members reading or reciting beloved classics or contemporary and “homegrown” verse. It is always an amazing mix of beautiful literature and the warm and familiar voices of our dear friends and neighbors. There will be cookies.

Cool website of the month: Go Botany, a project providing information and resources about New England plants, funded in part by the National Science Foundation. If you click on their “simple key”, you can find ways to help identify some of those woodland and field plants you’ve been wondering about. Their url is: gobotany.newenglandwild.org

We are hoping to open the library an extra 3-4 hours this summer. The past few years we’ve opened on Wednesday mornings from 9-12 in July and August. Are there other hours or days you would prefer? Let us know, and we’ll consider it. Our phone is 293-2565, and our email is: DrShaw@shaw.lib.me.us. You can “like” our Facebook page (Dr. Shaw Memorial Library) and post your preference there, too.
